DISTILLATES, LIQUORS & CREAMS

DISCOVER THE DIFFERENT TYPES

DISTILLATES

The distillates are obtained from products with prior fermentation and low alcohol content. The most common raw materials for fermentation are barley, corn, potatoes and even waste from other productions such as grape skins.

The distillation process consists of separating the alcohol from the water to obtain a liquid product of pure alcohol with a volume greater than 40°.

The distillates obtained are complemented with infusions to add particular and differentiating aromas, obtaining very personal nuances, such as marc, aguardientes, cachaça, anis, gin, rum, whiskey, tequila, vodka, brandy and others.

LIQUORS and CREAMS

They are alcoholic beverages product of a distillation, later aromatization and sweet flavors. They are bright, bright colors and their sweet and strong flavor, with high alcohol content, which varies between 27° and 55° depending on the mix.

The aromatization and flavoring is obtained with the addition of herbs, fruits, mixtures of both, chocolate, coffee, etc. Sometimes, depending on the density of the texture, they become Creams.

Liquors and creams use 2 main methods of production:

- All the ingredients are distilled at the same time.
- The herbs or fruits are added to the base distillation.
